INTRODUCTION
Thai drug policy has tended to be very conservative and centered upon a zero-tolerance approach to users and distributors of illicit drugs. While new national drug policies are announced every few years, successive governments have maintained the objective of making Thailand “drug free” and have focused resources primarily on—often repressive—law enforcement and compulsory treatment that often contravene international human rights law. Thailand has been slow to implement harm reduction or more effective treatment policies, and the actions of the police, attitudes of health workers, and existence of compulsory treatment often prevent users from accessing voluntary treatment and health and harm reduction services.

The family as grass root of institute society and have to faced with drug problem sharply and having trend more and more conflict so that disspread drug problem into community area and also family institute level which basic significance of develop teenagers. With drug trader has tried to disspread marking drug selling by several of strategies for consistent with values, needs and weak target of soft group people in community which was a group teenager. The government have to pay the budget for prevention and solution addictive drug. However theses guideline is not successful and sustainable in the overall sector and more effective problem in term of economy society and stable the entire country which is obstacle develop country prosperously.

The phenomenal addictive drug in Thailand has be more and more trend growth up, if it has conditions and the factors supporting network working of drug trader and interest group this might be more problem drug growing up in society such as (The committee prevention and suppress addictive drug office: 2009)

1) Border, most of the drugs come from neighboring countries and smuggled into Thailand, where terrain is a major problem. Because the smugglers can use the route to transport drugs into the country severel routes, especially in the north. The nature is wild. And the Northeast is a river with many hundreds of kilometers. It is difficult to control and arrest.

2) Area, there are 26 provinces where the proportion of drug addicts is approximately 70% of the country and the village / community area. The database of the Office of Narcotics Control Board (NCC) obtained from various agencies. There are about 15,000 villages / communities or about 15% of the villages / communities in the country.

3) The risk factors of the society, such as the values and negative behaviors of youth, mingling and entertainment / service. This is a factor that provokes youths to risk behaviors and to drug problems.

4) The family and community are weak, resulting in the inability of the basic units of the society to prevent drugs effectively, especially the family and the village. With drug problems there are still a number of risky families, such as trafficked persons and / or family leaders. When arrested and executed this will affect family members suffering from economic and social problems. In particular, children and youth who are under management must leave school. This is destroying the future of the nation.

5) Economic and social aspects The environment, especially in 2009, was a year when the country faced many problems, such as the global economic crisis affecting Thailand. The political crisis and the reconciliation of the people. Social crisis Crime is increasing. And unemployment and poverty. These crises often result in increased risk factors for drug addiction.

From the above. It is the responsibility of family leaders to stop or relieve the drug problem, especially if family leaders raise awareness in drug prevention and treatment. Unfortunately, there are no family leaders who are lacking or have not been empowered to consciously prevent and solve drug problems.
